

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method is provided for decoding and/or detecting data containing user information which is received by a communication network in order to provide a way to suppress error concealment and to provide improved error correction. The present invention is characterized in that a receiver of a communication terminal and a CTM-receiver exchange at least additional information relating to the reliability of the correct reception of the data thus received and that error processing of the data thus received is adjusted in a receiver.